INTRODUCTION

The 1987-88 Pennsylvania Public Library Statistics publication is compiled from information reported in the Public Library Annual Report for calendar year 1987 or fiscal year 1987-88 and is contained in Tables 1, 2, 3 & 4.

The publication is separated into two main categories of libraries. Parts I and II reflect the operations of libraries that participate in the State Aid to Public Libraries Program (State Aided Libraries) and Parts III and IV report data for libraries that do not participate in the State Aid Program (Non-State Aided Libraries). The combined total of State Aided and Non-State Aided Library data is given in the blocked section of Page 97. The data presented in charts and graphs reflects the combined statistics of State Aided and Non- State Aided libraries.

Libraries are organized by county and by the municipality in which the library is located. Where there is a system in place, the system headquarters is identified by an "H" preceding the library location. An "M" identifies system member libraries.

In general, column headings are self explanatory with two areas of note: In Table 3, the INCOME SCHOOL BOARD and INDIRECT FEDERAL AID figures are included in the TOTAL LOC GOV INC column. Also, the SALARIES WAGES AND BENEFITS figure represents all library employes including maintenance and security staff while FTE calculations exclude maintenance and security staff.

Reimbursement to libraries for participation in the ACCESS PENNSYLVANIA Statewide Card System is included in the State and Federal Income columns and in the State and Federal Expenditure columns as appropriate for each library.

The results and analysis of the 1987 Public Library Salary Survey is reported in Part VII.

Part VIII compares the local tax money a library receives with the available tax base, and then to the population the library is required to serve. The first table compares the local government income received by a public library with the market value of real estate in the municipality or municipalities the library serves. Since most of the local tax dollars that go to support public libraries in Pennsylvania are derived from property taxes, this table gives some indication of how the municipality or municipalities support the library relative to the tax base available to them.

The second table in this section compares local tax income to population served. This table gives an indication of how well the municipality or municipalities support the library relative to the number of people for whom the library must provide resources and services.

The market value of taxable property used in the first table is established annually by the Pennsylvania Tax Equalization Board. The figure given is the total market value of all municipalities within the library's service area. Local government income is reported by the libraries in the Public Library Annual Report. Service area populations include all municipalities from which the library receives income.

Accuracy is essential to the value and usefulness of this publication and notes of emission and error are invited.

STATE AID FOR PUBLIC LIBRARIES 1986-87
$19,500,000

 INTRODUCTION ***

The State Library of Pennsylvania, Library Development Division, in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Library Association, surveyed all public libraries to determine 1987-88 salaries and benefits for selected staff positions. 450 libraries were sent surveys; 318 returned them completed, a response rate of 70.7%. Summary and analysis of the data was completed in 1989.

Results of the survey are organized in the following categories:

Responses of all libraries
Responses of libraries serving above 20,000
Responses of libraries serving 10,000 - 20,000
Responses of libraries serving 5,000 - 10,000
Responses of libraries serving fewer than 5,000

Responses to questions that asked for a YES or NO answer are given in percentages. Because not every question was answered by every library, the number of valid responses for each question varies and is listed as VALID CASES. For example:

	VALID CASES	YES	NO
ARE RETIREMENT BENEFITS PROVIDED?	313	32.9	67.1

This example means that of 318 survey responses, 313 answered this question. 67.1% of the 313 libraries offer no retirement while 32.9% do offer retirement benefits.

For questions where the response was a number, such as salaries, or years, the RANGE (the lowest response given and highest response given), the MEAN (arithmetical average), the MODE (most frequently occurring response) and MEDIAN (the middle value, above and below which one half of the responses fall) are listed, as appropriate.

In cases where it is more meaningful, the MEDIAN is provided instead of the MODE. For example.

	VALID CASES	----RANGE---- MIN - MAX	MEAN	MEDIAN
SALARY OF STARTING PROFESSIONAL LIBRARIAN:	189	$2,366 - $29,600	$14,625	$15,000

From the above example we understand that 189 of the 318 libraries that responded to the salary survey answered this questions. The lowest reported starting salary for a professional librarian is $2,366 while the highest reported salary is $29,600. The average of the 189 responses is $14,625 and if the responses were ranked, the salary in the middle of the list would be $15,000. Because the MEDIAN figure is close to the MEAN, we understand the distribution of salaries is normal, that is, follows the familiar bell curve. With such a distribution, the MEAN can be used to accurately describe the data. In this example, the MODE figure is not given because it would not provide useful information in analyzing the data.

Responses were compiled for only those questions which were answered by enough libraries to produce reliable results. For instance, for libraries serving fewer than 5,000 residents, only three libraries responded to the questions pertaining to the children's librarian. Since three responses is too small a response to accurately represent all children's librarians in that service area group, no data was calculated for "children's librarian." In addition to the descriptive statistics mentioned above, a t-test was performed to verify the significant difference between the salaries of male and female librarians.

NOTE: The data collected for "Consultant Librarians" was unreliable due to confusion over the definition of a consultant librarian. Similarly, data for "Starting Salary of Clerical Staff" could not be verified. Information about these two staff categories is not included in this report.

The State Library would like to thank Anne M. McGhee, a graduate intern with the Pennsylvania State University, Masters in Public Administration Program for her contribution to the analysis and compilation of this data.

 RESULTS AND ANALYSIS ***

PROFILE OF THE PROFESSIONAL PUBLIC LIBRARIAN
(Based on responses to the 1987 Public Library Salary Survey)

To be certified as a professional public librarian in Pennsylvania, a person must hold a Masters Degree in Library Science. Forty percent of all professional librarians working in Pennsylvania public libraries work in either the Free Library of Philadelphia or the Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh. Before discussing general results, it should be noted these two libraries pay their professional librarians salaries that are higher than the average for Pennsylvania public libraries. In addition, as might be expected in large urban library systems, they provide retirement plans, life insurance and medical benefits. The survey describes a different situation for the majority of professional librarians who work in other public libraries in the state.

Professional librarians were most frequently found in public libraries serving 20,000 people or more. Of the positions surveyed, the jobs most frequently filled by a professional were director of the library and head of reference. Most professionals in surveyed positions were white females who worked at least 35 hours each week. Their average length of time in the position was over six years. Their average salary was $21,055.

Benefits are often nonexistent for these professionals. 67% of the public libraries responding did not provide any retirement benefits for professional librarians. 70% provided no life insurance; 87% provided no long term disability benefits; 56% provided no major medical.

In most public libraries, professional librarians paid their own personal association dues, their own subscriptions to professional publications and their own educational expenses. Most public libraries paid for conference expenses.

In the positions surveyed, there were six female professional librarians for every one male professional librarian. However, 65% of the male professionals were working as directors of libraries while only 46% of the female professionals were directing libraries.

In 1987-88, the average starting salary in a Pennsylvania public library for a professional librarian with no experience was $14,625.

SALARY PROFILE OF PUBLIC LIBRARY DIRECTORS
(Based on responses to the 1987 Salary Survey)

Not all public libraries in Pennsylvania require the library director to be a professional librarian. In public libraries serving smaller populations, directors are required to be certified at lower levels, such as provisional librarian (bachelor's degree and 12 credit hours of library science), or library assistant (two years of college and 9 credit hours of library science); in the smallest libraries, directors are not required to meet any level of certification.

Overall, regardless of certification level, Pennsylvania public library directors earn an average of $17,163 per year. Although 86.5% of all public library directors responding to the survey were female, the average salary for female library directors was about $12,000 less than the average salary for male library directors. Overall, female public library directors earned 56% of the salary male library directors earned.

Over half the responding libraries indicated their director was certified as a professional librarian. Certification as a professional librarian is required in Pennsylvania public libraries serving over 20,000 people. In public libraries required to have a professional librarian as director, the director earned an average annual salary of $25,338. 75% of these professionally certified public library directors were female. The average salary of these female library directors was about $10,000 less than the average salary of professionally certified male library directors, or 69% of the salary their male counterparts earn.

Female library directors overall worked an average of 12 months longer in their current position than male directors; while male professionals indicated they worked an average of 9 months longer in their current position than female professional librarians.
